Materials costs squeeze industry | J&J seals | $21.3bn deal

News analysis Manufacturers say that rising prices are going to weigh on margins despite strong earnings, writes Ed Crooks

Rising prices for commodities such as oil and steel and inflation in emerging economies are a threat to the revival of US manufacturing industry, executives at some of the leading companies have warned. Manufacturers such as United Technologies, Honeywell, Eaton, Ford Motor and Boeing have been reporting stronger-thanexpected earnings for the first quarter and often raising their forecasts of growth for the full year.

The industrial sector has been the second strongest in the S&P 500 this year, outperformed only by manufacturers' confidence in the global outlook has been growing, concerns about rising commodity prices, inflation in emerging economies, and the policy responses to those price rises have become increasingly pressing. This year, oil has risen by 22 per cent for benchmark Brent crude, while steel is up 17 per cent, driven by continuing strong demand in emerging economies and the recovery in the developed world. United Technologies, which makes Pratt & Whitney jet engines and Otis lifts, said it had been surprised by the strength of demand right across the business.

But Greg Hayes, chief financial officer, told the

that really concerns us this

The threat is not so much the squeeze on margins created by higher costs, although that is having an effect. Ford warned that earnings for the rest of the year might not be as strong as in its bumper first quarter, in part because of rising raw materials costs.

However, the large global manufacturers generally seem able to pass on their higher costs to their cus-Financial Times: "Commod- tomers, albeit with a lag.

only a temporary problem.

Sandy Cutler, Eaton's chief executive, pointed out that during 2003-07, when prices for energy and other commodities were rising steadily, the company had still been able to expand its

3M, the diversified manufacturer, also suffered a squeeze on margins from raw materials prices in the first quarter, but David Meline, its chief financial officer, told analysts on a conference call that "for the full year 2011, selling price increases are expected to offset raw material inflation"

The real threat for these companies is that the commodity price effect might hit demand, perhaps as a result of tighter monetary or fiscal policy intended to fight inflation.

David Anderson, chief financial officer of Honeywell, which makes parts for aircraft and vehicles as well as industrial equipment, said: "The industrial economy is doing very well, despite the challenging headlines."

But he added that the greatest risk he saw was "if have significantly greater commodity inflation and an oil price shock to the economy, and geopolitical instability, which could be interrelated."

There are winners as well as losers from higher oil prices. General Electric has been rapidly building up its business serving the oil and gas industry, buying Wellstream for $1.3bn and the well support division of John Wood Group for $2.8bn, and rising prices will mean more demand for customers to invest in its energy-saving equipment. Keith Sherin, GE's chief financial officer, said that a rising oil price "so long as it's gradual, is a net positive . . . At the range it's in, it's not a real problem." Similarly, Jim McNerney, the chief executive of Boeing, said on a call to analysts and media on Wednesday that "high-ish" oil prices could help push airlines towards buying his company's fuel-efficient aircraft. However, he added: "The concern is if oil prices get to the point where it has a significant impact on overall economic activity." So far, there has been little sign of that. Worldwide flight hours, for example – a key indicator for aerospace fuel costs will encourage companies - rose by 5.8 per cent in the first quarter, to exceed their 2008 peak.

Nor are interest rate rises in emerging economies such as Brazil and China yet having much effect on demand for US manufacturers' products. Mr Cutler of Eaton said he remained "very positive" about those countries.

While inflation has been rising in the US and Europe in recent months, remains relatively subdued. Yet, in a world in which economic clout has shifted to Asia and Latin America, rising prices there could still be a significant threat. Additional reporting by Hal Weitzman in Chicago

for control of Synthes

By Haig Simonian in Zurich

Johnson & Johnson has agreed a $21.3bn takeover of Switzerland's Synthes to create the world's leading orthopaedic devices group. J&J, which has a diversified healthcare business including drugs and devices, said on Wednesday it would pay SFr159 a share for Synthes, a 8.5 per cent premium over the Swiss company's closing share price on Tuesday.

Synthes shareholders will receive SFr55.65 in cash and the equivalent of SFr103.35 in J&J stock – approximately 1.7-2 shares – for each share they hold. The net cost to J&J will be about $19.3bn, given that Synthes has about $2bn in cash.

Shares in Synthes, which is based in the US but quoted in Switzerland, have risen sharply in recent weeks on takeover talk. Synthes confirmed earlier this month it was discussing a deal, but gave no assurances about the outcome.

The deal marks the biggest takeover for J&J, which has expanded rapidly through acquisitions in recent years. Combining the two businesses will create a big orthopaedics player, combining J&J's existing activities with Synthes's dominant position trauma surgery.

The sale also marks an exit for Hansjörg Wyss, the Swiss entrepreneur who created Synthes and expanded it through acquisitions.

Sales at Synthes reached $3.7bn last year on growing demand for its high-technology precision screws and plates, used for emergency surgery around the world.

Demand in the orthopaedics market, worth an estimated $37bn a year, is expected to grow strongly because of rising life expect-

Mr Wyss, aged 75, owns about 40 per cent of Synthes, with a further 8 per cent held through family trusts. He remains firmly identified with the company, having only given up management control three years ago.

The sale talk this month came as a surprise, as it had been widely expected in Switzerland that Mr Wyss would seek to maintain Synthes's independence, possibly through a longterm trust - a model similar to that at some other Swiss companies such as travel group Kuoni.

People close to the situation said Mr Wyss had examined all the options, including talks over the years with all the world's leading pharmaceuticals and medical equipment groups.

A clean break had emerged as the best solution, as this would also offer the best terms to the group's other shareholders.

The latest talks with J&J began last September, with the US group having emerged as the most suitable buyer, being big enough to afford the takeover and not so active in trauma products as to face serious competition constraints. J&J also had the reputation of leaving subsidiaries on a relatively long leash.

Credit Suisse advised Synthes. J&J was advised by Goldman Sachs.

Merck buy-back

Merck, the US pharmaceutical company, said it would repurchase $5bn of common stock, making it the latest drug company to buy back shares at a time when returns on research and development are shrinking, Alan Rappeport reports.

The move by Merck increases its share buy-back programme to $6.4bn, following its 2009 approval to repurchase $1.4bn.

"Merck has a history of leadership in returning cash to shareholders," said Kenneth Frazier, Merck's chief executive. "Together with our strong dividend, today's action reflects our confidence in Merck's strategy.

Merck's move follows the announcement on Monday by drug company Hospira that it would repurchase up to $1bn of common stock.

In February, Pfizer authorised a $5bn addition to its existing $4bn repurchase scheme. In January AstraZeneca doubled the amount of shares it plans to buy

United Technologies seeks emerging market expansion

United Technologies would "love to do deals" and has the capacity to make acquisitions after absorbing General Electric's security business, according to Greg Haves, its chief financial officer, writes Ed Crooks.

In particular, Mr Hayes told the Financial Times, the aerospace and building equipment group would like to add to its fire and security business in emerging markets.

With $4.2bn of cash on the balance sheet, it has the capability to pay considerably more than the $1.8bn it paid for the GE business in a deal that closed last year.

However, Mr Hayes said: "The bigger the prospect,

They accused the retailer of mistreating its workers and endangering small businesses, chanting: "Walmart cheats, Walmart hates, Walmart discriminates."

Walmart rejects such charges, but the preplanned demonstration underscored the political challenges in the way of the retailer's strategy.

Walmart is seeking to revive the growth performance of its US business by moving beyond "big box" stores to open smaller outlets in large cities. New America's biggest urban retail market, stands comments at a New York out as the final frontier.

The retailer has saturated suburban and rural areas with its low-price Supercenter stores, but stores open at least a year have produced seven consecutive

Four years ago Mr Duke's predecessor expressed exasperation over the cost and difficulty of his attempts to enter New York and said: "I don't care if we are ever here." Walmart has warmed to the city more recently and launched a campaign of lobbying and advertising to promote the benefits of its low prices, job creation and sales tax payments.

Tech firms navigate Congo strife

While the aftermath of the Japanese earthquake is causing many companies to worry about the electronics supply chain, a different pall is hovering over a rare, blue-gray metal that is mined in the Democratic Republic of the Congo.

The substance is tantalum, an ingredient in components that are a mainstay of devices such as smartphones, digital tablets and personal computers. Big technology companies such as Intel Corp. and Hewlett-Packard Co., which either use tantalum directly or buy semiconductors made with it, have started a push to find sources without links to war-torn regions of Africa.

A new U.S. law requires publicly traded companies to ensure key minerals in their products aren't coming from the Congo's rebel-controlled mines. A civil war in the Congo, the world's third-largest producer of tantalum, ended in 2003, but violence in the eastern part of the country continues.

The Dodd-Frank financial-regulation law, enacted in the U.S. last year, identifies four minerals-tantalum, tin, tungsten and gold—that are mined in the Congo and are blamed for helping to fund violent conflict there. Under the law, companies that use the four minerals must inform the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission annually whether any of them in their supply chains originated in the Congo or nine neighboring countries. If they did, the companies must tell the SEC what efforts have been made to determine the source and custody chain of the minerals.

Rules implementing the law haven't been finalized. As it stands. The law doesn't punish companies

Tantalum is used in parts such as capacitors, which store electric charges and help power most smartphones and other electronic devices Companies such as Intel and AT&T Inc. don't buy directly from the Congo. They purchase finished products through suppliers that source from smelters, which in turn buy from traders on the ground.

While tech products typically contain only trace quantities of tantalum, companies in the technology industry are its biggest buyers. "We're working to get to a conflictthat buy any of the four listed min- free space," says Chuck Mulloy, a spokesman at chip giant Intel, which uses tantalum in its semiconductors.

Mr. Mulloy says Intel is working with the Electronic Industry Citizenship Coalition, an industry body, to review 25 smelters in eight countries that supply minerals that end up in electronic products.

Intel is also setting up systems to track the minerals from the ground all the way through the doors of its semiconductor plants, a step the company and the electronics industry had taken before the law was passed, Mr. Mulloy says.

The Tehran-Damascus Axis

By Amir Taheri

Thursday, April 28, 2011

When the Arab uprisings started in Tunisia this winter, there were no more enthusiastic cheerleaders than the Khomeinists in Tehran. Their cheering got louder when revolution spread to Egypt, and louder still when Libyans rose in revolt.

But Tehran's cheering has begun to fade. The reason is that the revolt has spread to Syria, the mullahs' sole Arab ally.

Reports that Iranian snipers are gunning down Syrian democracy activists are credible given the deep military and intelligence ties between the regimes.

A sign that Tehran may be getting nervous came last week when the Islamic Majlis, Iran's ersatz parliament, published a report on "The Arab Revolution." The authors ask for "urgent action to protect our strategic interests" in case the regime of President Bashar Assad is toppled.

What kind of action? Syrian opposition sources claim that Tehran has sent snipers to help Mr. Assad kill demonstrators. The regime used this tactic during the protests following the disputed presidential election of Mahmoud Ahmadinejad in 2009. (Neda Agha-Soltan, the young woman who became the symbol of the pro-democracy uprising in Iran, was killed by one such sniper.) President Barack Obama has also spoken of Iran's possible involvement in Syria.

Whether or not Tehran has sent snipers to prop up Mr. Assad, the Islamic Republic is bound by treaty to help him fight "any threats against Syria's security and stability" Tehran and Damascus first signed a military cooperation treaty in 1998. At the time, Iran's minister of defense, Adm. Ali Shamkhani, stated publicly that the treaty would also cover "intelligence and security issues" with regard to dissident armed groups. Since then the treaty has been refined and deepened on several occasions, most recently under Mr. Ahmadinejac

Syria is the only country with which the Iranian armed forces and the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps hold joint staff meetings at least once a year. Iran has also emerged as a major supplier of weapons and materiel to Syria, according to the official Iranian news agency IRNA. Iran started using the Assad regime as a means of dividing the Arabs in the 1970s, when the shah wanted to squeeze the Baathist regime in Iraq. To this end, he supplied Syria with cut-price oil and aid totalling $150 million in 1977.

Under the mullahs, Syria retained its role in preventing the Arabs from ganging up against the then-fragile Islamic Republic. Throughout its eight-year war against Saddam Hussein, Iran benefited from Syrian support, including vital intelligence on Iraqi armed forces. As a gesture of goodwill, Tehran arranged for some mullahs to issue fatwas declaring the Alawite minority, to which the Assad family belongs, to be "part of Islam." Most Islamic scholars, on the other hand, have long regarded the esoteric Alawi sect as heretical.

Iran and Syria also share an interest in Lebanon. Syrian despots have always dreamt of annexing Lebanon. And under the shah, Iran regarded itself as the protector of Lebanon's Shiite community. Under the mullahs, Lebanon has been recast as "our revolution's perimeter of defense," in the words of Gen. Hassan Firuzabadi, chief of staff of the Iranian armed forces. In a speech in Tehran last month, Gen. Firuzabadi iustified Iran's support for Hezbollah in Lebanon and for Hamas in the Palestinian territories by underscoring the role that the two groups played in fighting "the Zionist enemy." And because of its geographical proximity, Syria plays a crucial role in channeling arms from Iran to both Hezbollah and Hamas.

Iranian-Syrian cooperation in Lebanon has a long history. In the words of Iran's former President Hashemi Rafsanjani, the countries worked together "to push the Americans out" with a suicide attack that killed 241 U.S. servicemen in 1983. In the decades that followed Tehran and Damascus used Hezbollah in hostage-taking operations and assassinations of Western diplomats and Arab poli-

Under Mr. Ahmadinejad, Iran has expanded its presence in Syria significantly. At least 14 Iranian "Islamic Cultural Centres" have opened across Syria, and hundreds of mullah missionaries have been sent to introduce Iranianstyle Shiism to Syrians. Similar tactics in Lebanon have succeeded in "Iranizing" a large chunk of the Lebanese Shiite community The Assad regime has a larger strategic importance for the Islamic Republic. "We want to be present in the Mediterranean,' Mr. Ahmadineiad said in a speech last month in Tehran, marking the arrival in the Syrian port of Latakia of a flotilla of Iranian warships. This was the first time since 1975 that Iranian warships had appeared in the Mediterra-

Indeed, Iran could build a presence in the Mediterranean through Syria and Lebanon, The Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps has already developed mooring facilities in the Syrian port as a prelude to what may be a full-scale air and naval base.

Mr. Ahmadinejad, who believes that the United States is in historic retreat, sees Iran as the successor to the defunct Soviet Union as the principal global challenger to what he says is "a world system, imposed by Infidel powers." The loss of Syria would puncture many of Mr. Ahmadinejad's aspira-

Over the years, it is possible that Iran has built a network of contact and sympathy within the Syrian military and security services. It may now be using that network to encourage hard-liners within the beleaguered Assad regime to fight on.

From the start, Tehran media have labeled the Syrian uprising "a Zionist plot," the term they used to describe the pro-democ racy movement in Iran itself. In 2009, the mullahs claimed that those killed in the streets of Tel ran and Tabriz were not peaceful demonstrators but "Zionist and Infidel" agents who deserved to die. The Assad clan is using the same vicious vocabulary against freedom lovers in Syria as snipers kill them in the streets of Damascus, Deraa and Douma.

By Derk Jan Eppink

Brussels seems to be on a different planet. While forcing European Union citizens and their governments to tighten their belts, the European Commission once again last week demanded more of their money, by way of a 4.9% in next year's EU budget. And in June, the Commission is due to release its proposals for increasing its "own resources"—i.e., more direct-taxation powers. The fact that they are unable to spend even their current budget properly doesn't perturb the bureau crats.

Since the European Court of Auditors was established in the 1970s, it has not once been able to are currently strapped for cash, approve an EU budget because it can never guarantee that the EU is to send billions of euros back to accounting for its spending correctly. In particular, the EU's structural and cohesion funds are riddled with financial mistakes, administrative errors and even

In January, Maarten Engwirda, a recently retired Dutch member of the Court of Auditors, lashed out against a "culture of covering up" in the EU. In an interview with the Dutch newspaper De Volkskrant, he said that the court's press releases on the EU budget are drafted in vague and inaccessible language in order to fool journalists, "All these failures never reached the outside world due to the Kremlin-esque information we provided." The court responded that Mr. Engwirda's remarks were totally "unfounded," although he had worked in the institution for 15 years and knows it nside-out. It's not just that the commission can't properly document its expenditures. It also has problems spending all the money it gets. Billions of euros remain unspent every year because structural and cohesion-fund projects have to be co-financed by member states. Since most European countries the commission is legally obliged them. Yet this year, the Cohesion Fund is getting €4.5 billion more than it was allotted last year, when no one knew how to spend the full pot.

So why should the EU want even more? The answer is all about power.

At the moment, 75% of the EU budget comes from national contributions and 25% are "own resources" from customs and agricultural duties and a percentage of the value-added taxes collected fer to have a completely EU-based taxation system, by which Brussels collects the money it thinks it needs from citizens without having to negotiate with national governments, Commission President José Manuel Barroso already out lined his vision for the new system last year, with his wish-list including EU taxation of the financial sector, carbon dioxide emissions, air transport, energy and corporate income; Europeans can expect to hear more details in January.

In return for easier access to more Europeans' money, Mr. Barroso promised that the new funding scheme would allow member states to reduce their national contributions to the EU. He wants to make a deal that would be palatable to net-contributing members like Germany, the Netherlands, Great Britain, tends to do is to increase the EU budget and pass on the costs directly to Europe's taxpayers. He told the European Parliament last fall that he thought the EU's current budget level of 1% of EU GDP was "too little to meet the growing tasks of the EU." Those in economically stronger countries—generally net contributors—would have to pick up the bill.

The commission and many mbers of the European Parlia ment are dreaming in particular of a financial-transaction tax, which would generate hundreds of billions of euros for the EU budget. A sort of European "Tobin tax." it would lead to a European bureaucracy on steroids. It would also do nothing to serve or enrich taxpayers, because the increased costs in the financial sector would be passed on to them.

EU-wide taxation would only lead to even bigger government in Brussels. But bureaucracies do not create jobs, except for themselves. Brussels should focus instead on its core task of leveling the playing field for entrepreneurial activity in a single market of 500 million people. That would foster the economic growth and revenue that Europe so desperately needs. In an open letter last year, the leaders of Britain, France, Germany, the Netherlands and Finland told the Commission: "Do not spend more, spend better." That's still very good advice this year.

Renesas plant supplying auto industry likely offline until June

By Juro Osawa

Thursday, April 28, 2011

HITACHINAKA, Japan—A major uto-parts supplier said it is scrambling to restart an earthquake-crippled factory by mid-June but that the plant will run at just 5% of normal capacity at the outset and it is unclear when full output will re-

Japan's Renesas Electronics Corp., which produces 40% of the chips used to control operations in cars, is working around the clock to restore a plant that was severely damaged by the March 11 quake.

"This is an extremely important plant for us, and we must put all our efforts into getting it back to work," Senior Vice President Tetsuya Tsurumaru said Wednesday. He said the company is making up for lost output by producing the chips at its other plants and outsourcing some orders to other chip makers. "We are making sure that our clients get the chips they need."

The Naka plant in Ibaraki prefec ture, north of Tokyo, makes 25% of all of Renesas's automotive microcontroller chips, the brains that control a variety of functions. Given the company's market share, that could translate to a 10% cut in global supplies of the chips. Renesas sells its chips to auto-parts makers, who in turn supply car companies.

The earthquake and subsequen power-supply problems affected eight Renesas plants in Japan. Operations at five of Renesas's 10 factories used in early-stage chip production-where clean rooms require uninterrupted power-were suspended. Many of those plants shut down because of disrupted power supplies, not because of physical ries, except the Naka plant, which accounts for about 15% of the company's capacity for early-stage production. Before the earthquake, the company forecast revenue of ¥1.15 trillion ($14 billion) for the year that ran through March.

Renesas expects the Naka plant partly to resume production by June 15. One line at the plant uses 200millimeter wafers and another uses 300-millimeter wafers. Wafers are the thin slices of silicon that form the base of semiconductors. Only the 200-millimeter line will resume production on June 15, and its initial output will be about 10% of its full capacity, or about 5% of what the plant as a whole produced before the earthquake.

"We are currently inspecting all the manufacturing equipment to make sure it's safe to resume operations," Mr. Tsurumaru said.

Since the earthquake, Japanese manufacturers and their customers have been struggling with how to cope with disruption to global supply chains. Some Japanese wafer suppliers, such as Shin-Etsu Chemical Co., have reported damages, fueling concerns over shortages of raw materials for chip makers. Mr. Tsurumaru said Renesas so far has been able to secure raw materials for chips until around September.

Touring the Naka factory with reporters. Mr. Tsurumaru and plant manager Takashi Aoyagi gave the first detailed account of what happened March 11 and how the company has tried to get the plant back up to speed.

When the earthquake struck, the company's Tokyo headquarters immediately received emails from all the offices and plants in affected areas except the Naka plant.

"When I finally got a call from Mr. Aovagi later in the evening. was so relieved." Mr. Tsurumaru said with tears in his eyes. All the Naka employees have been accounted for with no one killed. One employee broke a leg.

Four days after the earthquake Mr. Tsurumaru loaded his car with bottles of drinking water that Mr. Aoyagi had requested and visited the plant for the first time. "I couldn't go inside yet, but even from the outside, it was obvious that the damage was serious," Mr. Tsurumaru said.

When Renesas workers could finally enter the clean rooms 10 days after the earthquake, they saw part of the ceiling dislocated and some walls destroyed, "At that point we couldn't even think of where to begin," Mr. Tsurumaru said.

Mitsubishi stays wary as strong yen takes toll

TOKYO-Mitsubishi Motors Corp. on Wednesday said its fiscal fourth-quarter net profit fell 42% due to the yen's strength, and became the first major Japanese car maker to say it is too soon to give an outlook for the current fiscal year as the impact of last month's natural disaster remains uncertain.

Japan's sixth-biggest car maker volume posted a net profit of ¥17.8 billion ($218 million) in the January-March quarter, down from ¥30.5 billion in the same quarter a year earlier. The strong yen and lower domestic production due to a parts shortage caused by the March 11 earthquake and tsunami offset solid overseas vehicle sales. Revenue rose 4 9% to ¥5176 hillion

The maker of the world's first mass-produced electric car, the i-MiEV, said it will provide a projection for the current fiscal year through March as soon as possible.

Mitsubishi said it expects domestic production in the first half through September to fall about 20% from a year earlier. The company said it expects to start normal perations in October.

Still. Mitsubishi said it remains difficult to gauge the impact of production disruptions on earnings. There is a risk that our expected production may not be material ized," said Osamu Masuko, Mitsubishi Motors president.

Overseas factories haven't been affected by disruptions to the partssupply chain for now, Mitsubishi said. But production abroad may drop below the planned level in the July-September guarter and return to normal during the fiscal second

The magnitude 9 earthquake and tsunami hit northeastern Japan where about 500 auto-parts makers operate factories, disrupting supply chains and shutting down the factories of all Japanese car makers.

Makers reopened their plants by mid-April, but companies continue to face difficulties in procuring the parts needed to build vehicles.

A likely power shortage this summer as a result of the disaster will make it hard for Japanese car makers to run domestic factories as they would like. The Japan Automobile Manufacturers Association suggests each manufacturing sector take two weekdays off per week in rotation so peak power consumption can be cut to avert summer outages

In the fiscal year ended in March, Mitsubishi's net profit more than tripled to ¥15.62 billion from ¥4.76 billion. Revenue rose 27% to ¥1 828 trillion

While sexy modern designs, like midcentury Karl Springer coffee tables and John Vesey steel chairs, are going for fat sums in the U.S., prices for period pieces are down from their '80s peak. "Now is the time to buy good an tiques," insisted Guy Regal, the Manhattan antiques dealer, over lunch a few weeks ago. According to Mr. Regal, the market for period pieces, including 18th-century Louis, authentic English Regency and Irish Chippendale, is ripe for the picking. "There's a glut of important, dowager furniture out there and not a lot of demand. thus, a pricing free fall," he said. Consider this: A pair of Louis XVI fauteuils that were $35,000 15 years ago just went for $10,000 at

It's all great news for those with spare cash and an expert's knowledge of what to look for. I, on the other hand, am a touch short on both. But I am curious, and I do love a deal.

One trip to Mr. Regal's space at the chicly renovated Newel showroom on 53rd Street and I was ready to (pretend to) invest in Old World. His inventory is refined glitz—like if Jackie O were a table. Walking through the aisles, all that buffed mahogany reminded me of Cold War-era Sunny von Bulow décor, in a good way. The scale and seriousness of the furniture was inspiring and would offer a nuanced jolt to any room short on history. For those of us who obsess about living rooms, it's excit ing to bring home a glossy, gilded antique, like an Italian secretary desk, and redefine it for the 2010s against a more subdued backdrop.

Plus, this subgenre is not as gray granny as you might think-like it now. Trend followers have been blogging about old master fluffers like Mark Hampton and Mario Buatta with nostalgic longing, hoping for a neo-"Dynasty" revival. Style setters like Carolina Herrera

I asked Mr. Sansum, who has art and design degrees from Parsons, Cooper-Hewitt and Harvard, to illuminate how one might dip a toe into the market. "My advice to the neophyte collector is be curious," he said. "If you see a piece of furniture that intrigues you, go online to 1stdibs and look for similar pieces. Once you have established a style, period and country of origin then look for books by experts in the field." You'll want to do a lot of research before pulling the trigger on any pricey piece. I have been training my eye in 18th-century Wrightsman rooms at the Metropolitan Museum, and at the Cooshows: the Winter Antiques, the International and the Avenue—all at the Park Avenue Armory. I have also been visiting Sotheby's and Christie's online catalogs as if they were museums, as Sensai Sansum advised. One auction in particular he directed me to study was the February 2009 Yves Saint Laurent sale of furniture, art and objects. "It was vast in its range of tastes, but cohesive in its quality and personal approach," Mr. Sansum said. "These types of sales are important to expand one's aesthetic vision of periods and styles, but more importantly to see curious juxtapositions of disparate elements. That is the genius of an inspired collector?

Mr. Tsurumaru said the company hoped to restart microcontroller production on June 15, about a month earlier than previously estimated. But output will initially be only 10 percent of capacity, he said, declining to predict when Renesas would resume full production

To help meet demand, the company is shifting some production from the factory here to another Renesas factory in Japan not damaged by the quake. It is also farming out some manufacturing of automobile controllers to GlobalFoundries, a contract manufacturer in Singapore that has produced microcontrollers in the past. But shortages are expected to persist for months.

"Let's show Renesas's inner strength and unite our hearts to restart in June," read banners

Thus exhorted, workers have repaired the factory's ceiling, as well as a crucial air filtering system intended to keep out dust particles that can ruin the microscopic circuitry of the chips.

Test production has begun. Workers in white suits with facemasks and hoods worked in the clean room to repair and realign sophisticated machines that must be precise to billionths of a meter. But red lights next to most pieces of equipment indicated they were not in operation.

Toyota said recently that it faced shortages of 150 critical parts, not only electronic controllers but also rubber parts and paint additives. The company, Japan's biggest automobile manufacturer, said it would not be able to resume full production until the end of this year.

Automobile companies are not the only ones dependent on Renesas. For instance, Ricoh, maker of copiers and office equipment, gets some customized chips from Renesas. Ricoh executives say the Naka factory is their biggest concern among parts suppliers.

But microcontrollers, which are called mi-con in Japan (pronounced my-kone), are extremely important in automobiles because they act as the brains of electronic control systems.

A reason for the industry's heavy reliance on Renesas is that it is the product of mergers involving three Japanese semiconductor companies. Hitachi and Mitsubishi Electric merged their semiconductor operations in 2003 to form Renesas Technology. Then, last April, Renesas Technology merged with NEC Electronics, the former semiconductor division of NEC, to form the current company, Renesas Elec-

While different automakers once had their preferred electronics suppliers, after the merger everyone ended up buying chips from the same company, said Koji Endo, an automobile an-Advanced Research Japan, an equity research firm.

Renesas has emerged as one of the largest semiconductor companies in the world, with net sales of 1.06 trillion yen (about $13 billion), in the fiscal year that ended March 2010. (Partly because of the weak economy, its net loss that year was 137.8 billion yen, or $1.69 billion.)

While publicly traded, the company, which is based in Tokyo, is 90 percent owned by NEC, Hitachi and Mitsubishi Electric.

The Naka factory once belonged to Hitachi and is in a region where the electronics giant was founded as a motor manufacturer in 1910.

In automobile microcontrollers, Renesas's main competitors include Freescale Semiconductor and STMicroelectronics.

Automotive microcontrollers are mainly bespoke chips, with many different hardware designs and different types of software tailored for each design. That is partly a legacy of the auto industry tradition of each company designing and building vehicles to its own specifications. The automotive electronics industry is much the same, with many competing designs.

'These microcontrollers are different in small but important ways," said Tom Starnes, an analyst at Objective Analysis, a technology research firm. "That makes it very difficult to switch to alternate suppliers, at least not quickly." Switching could take six months or more, analysts say.

A particular challenge is the highly customized software that provides instructions for the various chips. From automaker to automaker, "there's no software compatibility at all," said Tomoaki Nakamura, who once oversaw automotive electronics for Hitachi and is now vice president for research at IDC Japan, a market research firm.

The lack of technical standards is in marked contrast to the way the personal computer industry evolved - with its standard formats for disk storage, memory chips, microprocessors and a dominant operating system in Microsoft's Windows, although Apple's Macintosh operating system is gaining a bit of ground

In recent years big automakers in the United States, Europe and Japan have formed consortiums to try standardizing some of their technology. The two main groups, AutoSAR and the Genivi Alliance, focus on software and electronics standards for drive train, information and entertainment systems.

Analysts say the crisis in Japan could accelerate progress on these standards-setting efforts, while prompting some automakers to reduce their dependence on Renesas.

"In the long term, automakers will probably spread their bets more to other major suppliers," said Egil Juliussen, an auto electronics analyst at IHS iSuppli, a research firm. "And there will be more reason to push the industry standardization efforts, now that automakers have seen what can happen when a key supplier goes

Chrysler Expected to Erase Its Debt to Government

Goal of Raising $7.5 Billion in a Bond Sale

By BILL VLASIC

DETROIT — Of the three Detroit carmakers, Chrysler was in the worst condition when the recession hit. And even with a taxpayer bailout, it has been slower to recover than its rivals.

But on Thursday, the company will announce a milestone in its comeback effort, declaring its intention to repay its $7.5 billion in high-interest loans — $5.8 billion to the United States government and $1.7 billion to Canada's — as soon as next month by selling new bonds to investors.

Once it pays back the loans, Chrysler can strengthen its ties to Fiat, its Italian partner, and begin adding more fuel-efficient cars to its truck-heavy lineup.

Sergio Marchionne, the chief executive of both Chrysler and Fiat, is expected to announce the debt plan Thursday when he welcomes the Treasury secretary, Timothy F. Geithner, for a tour of the company's Jeep plant on Detroit's east side.

Although details of the debt offering, to be led by Goldman Sachs, are still being negotiated, Chrysler intends to use the proceeds of the sale to help it pay off all of the government loans, according to people familiar with Chrysler's plans.

Both Chrysler and the Treasury Department declined to comment on the announcement.

The loans have been a psychological and financial drag on Chrysler's efforts to revamp its operations and gain market share since emerging from its government-sponsored ruptcy in 2009.

"They started in a very deep hole after the bankruptcy," said Dennis Virag, president of the Automotive Consulting Group in Ann Arbor, Mich. "Now they are making progress both in the product area and the financial

Mr. Marchionne has said that interest payments on its government loans were the only obstacle keeping Chrysler from being profitable in 2010, when the company lost $652 million.

Paying off the loans would also free Fiat to raise its ownership stake in Chrysler.

Fiat currently owns 30 percent of Chrysler, a stake it received in stages as part in the United States government's rescue of the smallest of Detroit's Big Three. In exchange for the ownership interest, Fiat agreed to provide engines and technology to make Chrysler's lineup more diverse and fuel-efficient.

Once the government loans are retired, Fiat plans to pay $1.3 billion for newly issued Chrysler shares, raising its ownership stake to 46 percent.

That deal will most likely accelerate the integration of Fiat and Chrysler and speed the arrival of new Fiat-based models for Chrysler to sell in the American market.

The refinancing is also expected to save money overall for Chrysler, which is paying high interest rates on the $5.8 billion it owes to the American government and the $1.7 billion it owes the Canadians.

"It's great they are tuning up their balance sheet by reducing debt." said Rebecca Lindland, an analyst with the research firm IHS Global Insight. "That will help them direct more money towards product development."

Under Mr. Marchionne's leadership, Chrysler has methodically improved its core products since coming out of Chapter 11. In the last year, Chrysler has introduced new, well-received versions of its Jeep Grand Cherokee sport utility vehicle and the Chrysler 300 flagship sedan.

The company has also benefited from positive reaction to its "Imported from Detroit" ad campaign that promotes its corporate resilience and improved product quality.

So far this year, Chrysler's sales are up 22 percent — slightly higher than the 20 percent increase in sales for the overall industry. The increase, however, is almost entirely attributable to improved sales of its Jeep models and Dodge trucks. The company's domestic market share has remained flat at 9 percent.

But the Fiat influence will be felt soon. Chrysler has just started to sell the Fiat 500 minicar in its American dealerships, and more new passenger-car models are in the pipeline.

Chrysler needs a more balanced portfolio to take advantage of the steady rise in popularity of smaller cars. The Ford Motor Company reported a sparkling

"Chrysler is in a better position now than a year ago, but they are still reliant on trucks versus cars," said Ms. Lindland.

Paying back the government loans will leave the federal government's ownership stake in Chrysler unchanged at 8 percent. But the new debt structure is considered a vital step toward a public stock offering by the company this year or in early 2012.

The majority owner of Chrysler is the health care trust for retired members of the United Auto Workers union, which has a 55 percent stake.

Chrysler has not suffered the same consumer disapproval that General Motors experienced from its government bailout. That was mostly because of G.M. came out of bankruptcy with the American taxpayer as its majority owner. But G.M. has mostly shed its dreaded image as "Government Motors" since the federal government cut its stake to 26 percent from 60 percent in G.M.'s stock offering last November.

In Chrysler's case, its biggest problem was a weak lineup of vehicles and tight constraints on product spending. But it now appears to be gaining momentum with new Fiat models

Analysts who had written off Chrysler after bankruptcy are now applauding Mr. Marchionne's slow, steady rebuilding of its product portfolio.

"It's sort of like the cat with 17 lives," said Mr. Virag. "They used up their nine, and they apparently still have more."

The safety board did not draw any conclusions about the cause of the rupture, which occurred at 34,000 feet. Independent experts said they were surprised that Boeing's inspectors had not caught such a basic mistake when the plane was built in the mid-1990s.

Mr. McNerney said federal investigators were still sorting out what happened.

His comments came as Boeing announced that its first-quarter earnings rose 13 percent to $586 million, or 78 cents a share, from $519 million, or 70 cents a share, a year earlier. Revenue slipped 2 percent to $14.9 billion, from $15.2 billion, on weaker revenue in the commercial airplane business.

The company, which also has a large military business, reaffirmed its guidance for the year, with revenue expected to be $68 billion to $71 billion and earnings to be $3.80 to $4 a share. Mr. McNerney said that Boefreighter and its long-delayed 787 Dreamliner passenger plane, and that it still expected to deliver 25 to 40 of these two models this year.

He said the 787 deliveries would include a mix of the first planes it has built, which have needed extensive reworking to fix poorly made parts from suppliers, and the latest jets, which are coming off the production line in much better shape.

The 787, built with lightweight composite materials to lower fuel costs, has attracted more sales about 850 — than any commercial plane in history. But the production problems have added billions of dollars in costs, and Mr. McNerney said the project's profitability would eventually be decided by how well longer-range versions of the plane sell. Mr. McNerney also said that Airbus's plan to update its A320 series with new engines was taking sales from smaller competitors, like Canada's Bombardier, rather than from Boeing. He said Boeing was still likely to forgo changing the engines on its 737 models and seek to introduce a new plane by 2019 or 2020.

NEW YORK - Were Artie and Bunny, the sad, selfish, adulterous couple who dream of showbiz glory in The House of Blue Leaves, to exist today, they'd be prime candidates for reality TV.

All of which makes the pairing of this Guare classic and David Cromer, who directs the new Broadway production of Blue Leaves ( $\star\star$  \strict \frac{1}{2} out of four), cause for excitement.

Having brought a raw naturalism and fresh topicality to works as diverse as Our Town and Brighton Beach Memoirs, Cromer seems just the man to revisit Guare's quirky, probing satire. And in this haunting, bleakly funny revival, which opened Monday at the Walter Kerr Theatre, the director and his starry cast deliver.

Ben Stiller funnels the perfect mix of delusion and dejection into Artie, a middle-aged zookeeper and aspiring songwriter sharing a squalid apartment with his schizophrenic wife, known to everyone as Bananas and played Artie's childhood friend, Billy, is

"All it took was (creator) Dick Wolf asking," D'Onofrio says between setups at the Chelsea Pier Soundstage in Manhattan. He is finishing up Episode 3 of Season 10, which begins Sunday (9 p.m. ET/PT) on USA Network.

After handing off his detective work to Jeff Goldblum, D'Onofrio left the series early in Season 9. He had been hospitalized briefly for nervous exhaustion in the fourth season but soldiered on for another five years.

He elaborates. "When you're a young artist, you're struggling to achieve all these things, and you wrap yourself into it and you're in this bubble. When you get older, your confidence is much greater, and your ability is much greater, and you're able to rely on the fact that (your acting ability) is going to be there when you pick it back up. So you can lay it down and go home and not think about it."

He credits his wife, Dutch model Carin van der Donk, with helping him reach this point. "I was kind of a loner, very introverted and pretty socially inept for a long period," he says. Engineer: Getting plan right is crucial

By MATT HELMS and JOHN GALLAGHER

Fundamental issues dividing city officials from business leaders and others staking millions of private dollars in building new light rail in Detroit must be ironed out soon if work is to begin next year, as Mayor Dave Bing hopes.

Among the questions: ■ Whether the rail line will run down the middle of Woodward — a design transit advocates say would be safer, faster, cheaper and more efficient or be built on the avenue's curb lanes, as the private backers of the proposed M-1 rail first envisioned to boost tourism and redevelopment.

■ What route the line would travel through downtown. Private backers initially envisioned a line running straight up and down Woodward from Jefferson. But the Detroit Department of Transportation, which will operate the line, prefers a route that bypasses lower Woodward in favor of a loop around lower downtown to connect with the Rosa Parks Transit Center west of Woodward.

■ How to pay for the long-term operation of the project. Ultimately, supporters say, a region-wide rail system, for which the Woodward line is seen as a first step, will require a regional tax.

Operating the line, as is the case with virtually all such lines elsewhere, would require a public subsidy.

And getting a state subsidy for the Detroit light-rail line would, in all likelihood, require putting control of the system into a regional transportation authority. That could spark resistance in Detroit to giving up control of a key piece of city infrastructure. At the same time, suburban voters may balk at approving a tax seen as largely benefitting the city.

Leaders must resolve those Schroeder, chief engineer for the American Public Transportation Association.

"If you're going to spend money to put a rail system in, you've got to do your homework. You want to be right the first time," Schroeder said.

In the beginning

It's been a delicate dance from the beginning a few years ago, when some of metro Detroit's wealthiest people pledged tens of millions of dollars to get the M-1 project going after previous city efforts stalled.

man Dan Gilbert pledged millions for the project, believing a privately funded and operated line could be built more quickly than a city-run project that might get lost in red tape.

But the project ultimately required cooperation between public and private interests, said Megan Owens, executive director of Transportation Riders United, a group that advocates for public transit.

"That's really where M-1 came from," she said, "this desire to get it done faster and to make sure it got done. But you can't really do a transportation project of this magnitude without working with the government. That's the reality."

The federal government has provided $25 million for the project, and it and the City of Detroit see the Woodward line as the first leg of a regional system.

David Goldberg, spokesissues now, said Martin man for Transportation for America, an advocacy group, said cities are building or expanding rail as a component of economic growth and redevelopment as more people opt to live and work in cities with reliable transit.

About 28 U.S. cities operate light rail or trolley systems, and at least a dozen more systems are in the works or under study, Schroeder said.

The Federal Transit Administration (FTA) acknowledged the project's high stakes for Detroit's future but would not discuss the project in de-

Paramedic testifies of finding chaotic scene, unconscious toddler

BY CHRISTINE FERRETTI The Detroit News

New Baltimore — A paramedic broke down in tears Wednesday as she recalled an afternoon last year when she entered a New Haven home and found an unclothed and unconscious 2-vearold girl lying in the middle of the living room floor.

"She was unresponsive, not breathing and she didn't have a pulse," Richmond-Lenox EMS paramedic Katie Eisen said.

Eisen testified about the chaotic scene during the preliminary examination Wednesday of Renee Marie King in 42nd District Court in New Baltimore. The 29-year-old is charged with felony murder, first-degree child abuse and first-degree criminal sexual conduct on allegations she sexually assaulted and killed her stepdaughter, Lily Lynette Furneaux-Wolfenbarger. The hearing resumes today.

Prosecutors say King and Lily were alone Nov. 20 at the home in to Eisen that day about what hapthe Meadow Creek Mobile Home pened. She also told the para-

Eisen said while working on the child following a 911 call shortly after 2 p.m., King told her she wasn't sure what happened. "She said she was in the shower and came out and found her," Eisen said. After the comment, King's attorney, Michael Dennis, pointed out that his client made several inconsistent comments

Lilv's mother, Lauren Furneaux, testified Wednesday that she and Wolfenbarger shared custody of the child. Wolfenbarger cared for Lily weekly from 6 p.m. Monday to 6 p.m. Thursday and every third weekend.

Furneaux said her daughter was in good health when they left her home in Lapeer at 8:30 a.m. that day to meet Wolfenbarger at a gas station to exchange Lily for the weekend. The 24-year-old said she handed her to Wolfenbarger and it was the last time she saw her alive.

Furneaux said Lily "didn't want to go" and was often troubled when she returned from visits at his home.

"She was very upset when she came back and very clingy," Furneaux said, adding she had on occasion noticed cuts, bumps and bruises on her daughter.

Furneaux confirmed for Dennis that she never alleged abuse or contacted Child Protective Services.

State Police probe to continue, but mayor says 'we need him'

BY STEVE PARDO The Detroit News

Romulus - Police Chief Michael St. Andre is set to return Monday from a leave of absence that began March 16 in the wake of a Michigan State Police investigation.

"We need him to come back to work," Romulus Mayor Alan Lambert said Wednesday. "I just think it's time for him to come back to work and do his job with this department."

State Police raided the police station, St. Andre's home, his wife's Westland tanning salon and other locations March 15. The chief said those raids stemmed from an investigation that began nearly three years ago.

Lambert and St. Andre said they've been cooperating with the investigators since then. Lambert said in March he thought the raids were "overkill."

Detective Sgt. Derran Shelby, who has served as acting chief, will resume his former position. Lambert said the department will continue to cooperate in the investigation.

Lambert said Shelby "did an outstanding job as acting police chief ..."

State Police officials confirmed the investigation is con-

N.D.G co-proprietors end up in court

Defendant vindicated is awarded $130,000

PAUL DELEAN THE GAZETTE

Every month, Quebec judges issue dozens of judgments that, without making headlines, set the ground rules for business in Quebec. Here are a few of the offbeat and/or consequential rulings rendered this

A 63-year-old woman - we'll call her A.B. - who sued to have an N.D.G. property confirmed as her own got exactly the opposite result in Superior Court.

She was done in by a document she'd prepared in 1998 to make it look like she had no assets in order to collect welfare.

A.B. and a woman she met through a newspaper ad for a roommate-let's call her C.D.-bought the house together in 1988 for $289,000, and A.B. subsequently ceded her half to C.D. in a notarized docu-

She confirmed as much to social agencies while collecting welfare from 1998 to 2007, saying she was simply a tenant paying rent of $425 to $485 a month (although actual rent was never paid).

In 2007, C.D. was hospitalized for several months, and when she attempted to return to the house where she'd paid virtually all expenses since 1993, she was intercepted and turned away by police.

A.B., then living alone in the home, had reported receiving death threats from her, a frivolous claim intended only to force C.D. to live elsewhere for several months, Judge Jean-Pierre Chrétien said in his judgment.

(Charges were dismissed when A.B. didn't show up to testify when the matter came to court later that

In her suit for the property, A.B. produced a document showing C.D. had in fact ceded her 100 per cent of the house in 1990, but the judge said it was overridden by the private agreement they concluded in 1998 (when A.B. started receiving welfare) which said C.D. was the sole proprietor.

Chrétien acknowledged A.B. paid half of the house initially, but her failure to pay anything (including rent) since 1993 effectively cancelled out her entitlement to reimburse-

He awarded C.D. a further $30,000 for lost property and $100,000 in damages for the trouble and inconvenience caused her by A.B. over the years.

Selling your house doesn't necessarily terminate your responsibility for it, as a couple from St. Sauveur discovered.

in 2004, the new buyers got significant water infiltration in the basement. An inspection showed the French drain was not only blocked, but badly installed.

They sued for $35,277 in repair and renovation costs, arguing it had been a vice not visible when they first had the home inspected.

Quebec Court Judge André Renaud this month awarded them $18,427, with interest, for drain repairs and professional fees, but rejected the $13,432 sought for basement renovations.

The defendants had argued that, because the home was 30 years old, the French drain simply reached the end of its working life, but an engineer who testified for the plaintiffs said the key was the faulty installation, not its age.

Judge Renaud nonetheless reduced the amount sought for drain repairs by 25 per cent as a concession to age depreciation.

Four years after the $265,000 sale A woman who sued an off-island daycare centre for $7,000 after it fired her got a rude awakening in small-claims court.

Not only did Quebec Judge Alain Breault accord her just $25, he ordered her to pay $550 to the daycare centre for group health-plan coverage maintained when she stopped showing up for work.

The woman, hired in 2003, began to miss work repeatedly after a car accident in 2005.

At one point, the woman spent two months in Peru without even advising the daycare centre, court

After getting fired in 2008, she sued on the grounds it was abusive and in bad faith and that she was not given due notice.

After weighing the evidence, Breault ruled the employee was terminated in all legality, and with

Canam sees recovery accelerating

ROBERT GIBBENS SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE

Quebec's biggest steel fabricator, Canam Group Inc., said Wednesday its order backlog at March 31 was $519 million, up seven per cent from Dec. 31, as its U.S. business recovers slowly from the 2008-2009 slump in commercial and industrial

But chief operating officer Marc Dutil cautioned it will be a volumeled recovery at first with price improvements coming some time later, with most of Canam's business in the U.S. It has been giving up margins to preserve its job count over the past year.

Marc will step up from president and COO to CEO on Jan. 1, taking over from his father, Marcel Dutil, the company's founder and chief architect, who will remain chairman of the board.

"You can be sure business will be a lot better when he moves into the top spot next year," Marcel Dutil told analysts.

Canam posted a first-quarter loss of $39.7 million, or 88 cents a share, after making a special $25-million after-tax provision to cover cost overruns for the steel cables it is installing for the new BC Place retractable roof in Vancouver.

Another factor was settlement of a five-year-old U.S. lawsuit - the terms of which were not disclosed. Sales in the latest quarter were $150.6 million, up 48 per cent from a year earlier. In the first quarter of 2010, Canam posted a $600,000 loss, or one cent a share.

Canam won the $100-million contract for the steelwork for BC Place's cable-supported retractable roof in 2009. It replaces a trouble-plagued air-supported dome roof.

Marc Dutil said the expected impact of the BC Place project as a whole will be limited to the special charge. Canam lacked experience in cable erection technology, he said, and relied on outside cost estimates, leading to delays. "We hope to recover part of the $25 million later," he added.

The FabSouth unit in Florida was a solid revenue generator in the March quarter, international business improved and Canadian operations were on the uptrack despite the surging loonie. Capital spending was $6.5 million, down from $7.5  $\,$

Canam, best known for its steelwork for sports stadiums, office towers and bridges, has 3,000 employees and 25 plants and engineering offices in North America, Romania, India and China and has partnerships in the Mid-East.

Jazz tuned out after a decade

The rebranding will effectively out an end to the Jazz brand after a decade at Air Canada.

Jazz itself was created in a simiar manner in 2001 as an umbrella brand for Air Canada's various regional subsidiaries, including Air BC, Air Nova, Air Ontario and Canadian Regional Airlines.

But the regional division was eventually spun off as a separate company, Jazz Air Income Fund, in 2004 as part of Air Canada's restructuring under bankruptcy pro-

Jazz Air Income Fund then converted to a corporation at the end of 2010, creating a holding company, Chorus Aviation Inc., and a subsidiary airline, Jazz Aviation LP.

While Jazz Aviation still provides the bulk of Air Canada's regional flying, both Chorus and Air Canada have increasingly been looking to diversify their business.

Chorus announced last year it would begin operating a fleet of 757s on behalf of Thomas Cook Canada Inc. this past winter, in direct competition with Air Canada Vacations.

Air Canada, in turn, chose to award its contract from Toronto Island to Sky Regional, which could operate at a lower cost than Jazz.

Air Canada intends to put additional regional service above the threshold guaranteed to Chorus to competitive bidding, the source said.

Air Canada does, however, still have a commercial agreement in place with Chorus extending to

The so-called capacity purchase agreement sees Air Canada purchase effectively all of Chorus's regional capacity at a fixed rate before selling it back into the market, determining where the planes fly as well.

ExxonMobil unveils development plan for N.L.'s fourth offshore oil field

FINANCIAL POST

ExxonMobil has formally submitted its application to develop Newfoundland's Hebron oilfield — outlining heftier production platform costs, and first oil by late 2017. The cost of building the Hebron platform and drilling development wells is now estimated at more than $8.3-billion, according to the application for the province's fourth offshore oilfield that was filed on April 15 with the Canada-Newfoundland and Labrador Offshore Petroleum Board. Earlier, Hebron development costs were pegged around $5-billion, though that estimate was several years old. ExxonMobil estimates production operations will cost more than $5.8-billion over the life of the oilfield until 2046. The application anticipates a $3.5-billion price tag for a portion of Hebron known as Pool 3, but it could go as high as $5-billion if it's fully developed. Discovered in 1981, the Hebron oilfield consists of three main fields — Hebron, West Ben Nevis and Ben Nevis — containing a combined 700 million barrels of oil. Postmedia News

CENOVUS PROFIT FALLS 91% ON GAS SLUMP

Cenovus Energy Inc. reported Wednesday that first-quarter profit dropped 91% to $47-million, hurt by lower natural gas production and lower prices. The Calgary-based company said that earnings per share plunged to 6¢ for the three months ending March 31. Cenovus earned $209-million in operating income, or 28¢ per share, down from $353-million, or 47¢, a year ago. Analysts on average were expecting the company to earn 36¢, based on Thomson Reuters consensus. Last year, Cenovus posted a profit of $525-million, or 70¢ a share. The oil sands producer pinned the lower profit on decreased natural gas production and lower prices, as well as higher income taxes and royalties. John Shmuel, Financial Post

HUSKY HAS STRONG Q1 ON HIGHER PRICES

Husky Energy Inc., Canada's No.3 integrated oil company and controlled by Hong Kong billionaire Li Ka-shing, said its first-quarter profit rose 70%, fuelled by increased output and higher crude oil prices. January-March earnings jumped to $626-million, or 70¢ a share, from $368-million (41¢) a year ago. Adjusted earnings rose to

$637-million, or 71¢ a share, from $358-million (42¢), topping analysts' average estimate for 52¢ a share, according to Thomson Reuters. Oil produ-

NEXEN CONTINUES HUNT FOR SHALE PARTNER

Nexen Inc., Canada's No. 6 independent oil producer, which reported a 43% jump in quarterly profit on Wednesday, said it is still on the hunt for a partner for its massive shale gas holdings in northeastern British Columbia, but the Japanese earthquake has delayed the process. Nexen has opened a data room where would-be investors can review the company's confidential information on its shale gas resources in the region, and says a half-dozen potential buyers have shown interest. Nexen earned $202-million, or 38¢ a share, in its first quarter, up from $141million (26¢) a year ago. But it said it is less likely to meet the upper end of its full-year production target range due to problems at its Buzzard and Long Lake projects. Reuters

TEMBEC Q1 LAGS AS FORESTRY DEMAND FALLS

Tembec Inc.'s quarterly profit lagged estimates, as lower demand for construction lumber and a fall in newsprint shipments dragged results, sending the Canadian forest products-maker's shares down 5%. Quebec-based Tembec, which supplies the North American housing space with Spruce-Pine-Fir lumber, expects its forest products segment -27% of total sales - to post disappointing results until U.S. housing starts recover. Revenue at the company's fast-growing dissolving pulp segment rose 20% on increased shipments and higher pulp prices. January-March profit was $7-million, or 7¢ a share, versus analysts' forecast of 22¢ a share, according to Thomson Reuters. Reuters

No plans to shift away from gold: Munk

BARRICK AGM

BY PETER KOVEN

TORONTO • For investors questioning Barrick Gold Corp.'s $7.3-billion offer for copper miner Equinox Minerals Ltd., chairman Peter Munk has a simple message: The opportunity was far too good to pass up.

"You'd have to be counterintuitive not taking advantage of the potential billion-dollar annual cash flow that you can get," he told shareholders at Barrick's annual meeting in Toronto.

"And that's the kind of free cash flow... that provides the lifeblood of any corporation that's aggressively determined

Mr. Munk assured investors Barrick has no plans to shift its focus away from gold, saying it would be "idiotic to kill the goose that laid the golden egg."

But he also stated it would be "equally foolish" to refuse to change. Without naming names, he referred to companies that disappeared because they were reluctant to do anything but their core business. He said copper is a natural business for Barrick to be in given that it requires the same skills and people as gold mining.

The comments came after a flurry of analysts and investors raised concerns that Barrick's valuation multiples could contract if it increases its copper revenues, since gold miners trade at higher multiples than base metal miners. The Equinox deal effectively doubles Barrick's non-gold revenue to 20% of the total.

Chief executive Aaron Regent repeated his comments from earlier this week that Barrick's mix of gold and nongold revenues are in line with peers, even after the Equinox acquisition. He also pointed out that about 80% of Barrick's reserves are gold, which compares favourably with rivals.

"We have a lot of opportunities on the gold side, and the copper side will complement what we do on the gold side,"

Mr. Munk's comments about the importance of free cash flow were timely, because Barrick demonstrated on Wednesday that it is simply swimming in cash.

The company reported a record first-quarter profit of US$1-billion, with operating cash flow reaching US$1.44billion. Earnings like that were unimaginable a few years ago — by comparison, Barrick had a profit of US$51million in the first quarter of 2005. And assuming gold and copper prices remain strong, Barrick's cash flow is set to rise even more as the giant Pueblo Viejo mine in the Dominican Republic starts commissioning late this year.

The earnings appeared to calm investors, who wiped out more than US$5-billion of Barrick's market value on Monday and Tuesday after the Equinox deal was announced. The stock rose more than 1% on Wednesday.

"[The first quarter's] robust cash flow, following on from previous quarters of good results, should help stabilize the company's share price and allow a recovery," Stifel Nicolaus analyst George Topping wrote

Barrick produced 1.96 million ounces of gold in the quarter and said it is on track to meet its full-year guidance of 7.6 to eight million ounces. Cash costs in the quarter were US$437 an ounce, which is well below most competitors.

Rising costs the next big headache

Cenovus's operating and net earnings were significantly depressed by its exposure to natural gas. Meanwhile, Nexen, a top and growing North Sea producer, cashed in from Brent prices, which averaged US$105 a barrel for the company, a premium of US$11 over WTI. ■ Politics: Unrest in the Middle East joined the U.S. administration's ambivalence about fossil fuels - particularly the oil sands — as major political wild cards for Canadian oil producers. Middle East turmoil lifted Brent prices in the quarter, but also meant lost production for some Canadian producers such as Suncor, which has operations in Libya. Meanwhile, Nexen is trying to renegotiate an extension of its agreement with the government of Yemen that is expiring at the end of the year, but talks have not pro-

Execution: Today's projects are increasingly complex and often involve new technology. That's why getting a project to perform as planned is not a given. Nexen's $6-billion Long Lake oil sands project stands out for its difficulties in ramping up production. The company said it's now looking at deploying 10% to 15% in additional capital to improve operational performance

■ Resource quality: Not all oil resources are created equal. In the oil sands, for example, there is a big disparity between leases. Some have great continuous reservoirs, making them great producers, and others don't. This is reflected in the difference in performance of steam-assisted gravity drainage projects. Typically, companies chase their best-looking prospects first, which means the quality of their next prospects could decrease.

■ Accidents: They happen and can wreak havoc on a company's performance, reputation and future prospects. BP PLC's Macondo well disaster last year impacted the whole industry, including Nexen, which was affected by a drilling moratorium in the Gulf of Mexico. Husky's downstream results were hurt by a fire at its upgrader in Lloydminster, which reduced its run rate from February to April. Canadian Natural Resources Ltd.'s results, due next week, will reveal the financial hit from its fire in January at the Horizon oil sands project. ■ Hedging: Oil companies enter into hedging contracts for their production to ensure they have cash flow to fund their programs. But making the right calls is difficult and can lead to big bottom line hits. Cenovus's profit was eroded by an unrealized after-tax hedging loss of $201-million.

■ Market access: Producing oil and gas is a major part of the business, but reaching markets is also important. Pipeline constraints kept Canadian production from getting to U.S. markets in the first quarter, resulting in a discount between WTI and Brent of an estimated US$22.86 a barrel, according to Cenovus. Meanwhile, an extension of the Keystone oil pipeline proposed by TransCanada Corp. is waiting for long-delayed approval by the U.S. government, which is stalling amid green movement opposition. The more oil prices rise, the more interesting the business could get. Watch for rising costs to be the next big headache. The political landscape could also get more hostile if the NDP secures a bigger role in the federal election, leading to higher taxes, less federal support for the oil sands and a heftier green
