Fortunato Agazio (deceased salaried GM retiree) Wife Judith Agazio

1. Enclosed is copy of tax statement showing that we paid Federal taxes on the insurance GM failed to pay AS STATED IN THE FOREVER LETTER .

We paid that for MANY YEARS and consider the letter and taxes as binding.

2. Also newspaper article showing GM habitual discrimination of salaried retirees as shown by the treatment of the Delphi salaried retiree. GM HAS UNSAVORY HISTORY OF USING THE SALARIED RETIREE AS SCAPE GOATS.

3. Ethics in business. The discrimination against salaried retirees is UN-ETHICAL and must be stopped. Only when people in power, bring companies to task for unfair treatment of groups of retiree-s will this travesty stop.

4. We bought Long term nursing insurance(John Hancock) through GM many years ago, based on our GM benefits (before they took them away from salaried re-tiree) The insurance starts after 3 months of medicare re-hab, HOWEVER, we now get 3 WEEKS OF REHAB NOT 3 MONTHS SO-o-o, that leaves a big gap with the long term insurance, like 9 WEEKS, before the long term kicks in., which I am liable for if the time comes.

The UAW HAS THE 3 MONTHS plus everything else, we don't.

IT IS TIME TO GET THESE COMPANIES TO COMPENSTAE THIR EMPLOYEES FAIRLY.

ONLY JUDGES with integrity and not INDEBTED TO A POLITICAL PARTY and others in power with courage can change the country. You can bring hope back to Americans in a big way.

Delphi Salaried Employees Retirees

DETROIT (AP) — Former reporters' labor union sued the Obama administration in federal court Thursday.

Shows history of discrimination against Delphi Retirees

The Delphi Salaried Retirees Association is preparing to move ahead with its lawsuit against the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation despite the dismissal of part of its original complaint against the Obama administration.

Den Black, DSRA president, said Thursday the ruling last week by U.S. District Judge Arthur Tabor gives the organization the right to question PBGC officials closely about the process that led up to the federal takeover of the Delphi salaried pension fund back in August 2009.

The PBGC takeover of the salaried pension fund led to substantial cuts made to President Barack Obama and Steve Rattner, the head of the Obama administration anti-task force which was run by the Treasury Department.

Tabor said the DSRA's original complaint failed to include sufficient factual allegations against defendants from the Treasury Department. The dismissal was required under recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions emphasizing the need for fact-specific allegations.

The decision does not prevent the DSRA from amending the complaint at a later time to add additional factual allegations.

Black said the judge also noted, "The Court also anticipates that the ed for political reasons. Tarnow rejected the PBGC's argument that the court should limit its review of the salaried plan's termination to a review of administrative records. The ruling also granted the salaried retirees' proposed scheduling order, in which the parties will have until the end of April 2012 to complete discovery. Black said.

The judge, however, also dismissed the claim against the U.S. Treasury defendants, including Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner and Ron Bloom, a former Delphi, which was spun off by General Motors Corp. in 1999, has said the pensions were transferred to the PBGC to satisfy the terms of a deal with private equity groups to help finance the big automotive supplier out of bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, GM refused to take responsibility for the underfunding of Delphi's salaried pension plan, saying they had left the company with ample funds after the spin off.
